This essay sheds light on why gold and silver bullion coins do not warrant the investment and also elucidates the advantages and disadvantages of investing in gold and silver bullion. The criterion for how to determine if a cryptocurrency warrants the investment and the advantages and disadvantages of investing in cryptocurrencies are also explicated in this essay. Moreover, the myriad of risk of investing in cryptocurrencies and the types of companies with extremely low profit margins that you should avoid investing are identified in this essay. Furthermore, how low profit margins can ravage a business, the formula for generating wealth that can prudently forecast the future profitability outlook of a company, and how to apply the formula for generating wealth to determine if buying shares of equity in a company is a prudent investment is delineated in this essay. Additionally, unconventional investment strategies for how to afford to retire prematurely without ever having to be an employee of a corporation are identified and how to earn substantial money online to be able to afford to invest in various financial markets in the digital era is meticulously expounded upon in this essay. While an investment in bullion in the forms of silver bullion coins and gold bullion coins may seem warranted due to their lofty intrinsic values, durability, scarcity, utility, and deflated prices, bullion coins do not warrant their asking price. The currencies of the past will not be the currencies of the future and the dire issues appertaining to investing in gold and silver bullion are numerous for currency investors. First and foremost, neither silver bullion coins nor gold bullion coins are income generating assets. This means that they do not allow investors to reap a dividend payment, unlike shares of equity with high dividend yields or index funds. Moreover, in stark contrast to bonds, silver bullion coins nor gold bullion coins do not generate any coupon payments. In other words, your silver bullion coins nor gold bullion coins will not be able to generate you any semblance of income unlike stocks, bonds, index funds, mutual funds, rental properties, and annuities. There is no guarantee that you will even reap a capital gain when you liquidate your silver bullion coins and gold bullion coins and succumbing to paying the lofty broker fee for that sales transaction to transpire. Second, much to the investor's dismay, neither silver bullion coins nor gold bullion coins are easily liquidable. In stark contrast to stocks, you cannot easily liquidate silver bullion coins nor gold bullion coins. Additionally, you will have to pay a jeweler a hefty broker fee on the sale of the silver bullion coins or gold bullion coins even if you sell them at a capital loss. On the other hand, brokerage firms offer commission free stock trades which allows you to liquidate your stocks without succumbing to a capital loss if the pricing of the stocks remained stagnant. If you for instance need to sell a gold bullion coin and the price has not amplified since you purchased it and has remained flat then you will succumb to a capital loss by paying a hefty broker fee when you sell it to the jeweler at a capital loss. Third, silver bullion coins nor gold bullion coins may be preordained to plunge in value as asteroid mining and space mining becomes all the more prevalent in the coming years. If precious metals can be extracted from mining asteroid and planets then this upcoming space mining boom could easily devalue the prices of gold and silver bullion coins and other precious metals since the supply of these covetable precious metals could drastically amplify in the coming years which would render them far more abundant and less scarce. Fourth, silver bullion coins nor gold bullion coins provide an easy means of exchange. Silver bullion coins and gold bullion coins are heavy and do not have many weight denominations. Don't have gold in your investment portfolio? Here's why you're missing out. Is gold just for the rich? Is it irrelevant in this highly digital economy? Will it be of any use to your already diversified portfolio? With prices at thousands of dollars for a few grams, gold is an expensive element. You'd have good reason to believe that it's only something the wealthy would buy, and probably just as a part of their collection of expensive things. But gold is much more than a material for luxurious jewelry or for ornate decorations. Nowadays, gold is considered a safe haven for investors in an increasingly volatile market. Some investors invest in gold when they foresee a recession, inflation, or uncertainty. Others hold on to gold to preserve wealth, while having a vehicle to pass it on to future generations. In short, because uncertainty is inherent in any investment and in any economy, gold can serve as insurance in case of economic or political disasters. Even in a highly digitized economy, gold continues to be attractive because it's a tangible asset that can still be of value, even if our entire monetary system collapses. Fortunately, gone are the days when you had to pan for gold in a river, under the heat of the sun, with the possibility of ending up with nothing but a severe sunburn. In today's economy, gold is easier to access and more affordable as well. There are several ways to invest in gold that require nothing more than a computer, an internet connection, and a reasonable amount of money.
